Qualifications

Please describe your relevant analytical skills.

As an attorney, I am constantly required to analyze and assess a variety of different issues and situations. Situations can include anything from reviewing legal case law and precedent to reading the body language of a judge listening to my client testify. Further, when it comes to sheer language interpretation, an attorney's assessment can be very helpful. While "thinking like a lawyer" has its advantages, I am lucky enough to also have another level of analysis that will be relevant to the commission.

My formal training at the LBJ School focused on public policy analysis. You can't get through their master's program without obtaining a solid foundation in data analysis. My internship at the African American Chamber of Commerce here in Austin, allowed me to flex these skills through a project focused on developing a plan to strengthen the chamber via capacity building initiatives. My work on the allgo board primarily focuses on another aspect of my LBJ training, community assessment. At allgo, I'm regularly required to assess qualitative data and apply that information to programing.

The combination of these two paths of training makes me uniquely qualified to serve on this commission.

Please describe your ability to be impartial.

I define impartiality as 1) respecting and reviewing all relevant information and points of view, 2) leaving one's personal interest out of a deliberation, 3) making decisions that one wouldn't be embarrassed to explain to the public. I'm providing my definition so that the panel can make a good assessment regarding my impartiality.

While at UT I served on the Student Activity Center Ad-Hoc Committee which was tasked with creating and implementing a plan to build a new student facility on campus. In designing the facility, it became very apparent that there were numerous groups on campus hoping to get some share of the space in the building. While on that committee I strived to stay true to the goal of increasing student space by remaining impartial when assessing group's proposals. Returning to the original goal can have a grounding experience that helps insure impartiality.

As an attorney, I'm required to look impartially at my client's case and give them an accurate assessment of their chances at court. The success of my business requires me to be good at separating myself and my client from their case. If I'm not, my client would be unsuccessful AND frustrated with me and the results of their case.

Please describe your appreciation for the City of Austin's diverse demographics and geography.

I've lived in Austin since 1999. I have earned three degrees at the University of Texas and worked in numerous jobs. Following my JD degree, I started my own law practice. In the time I've been in Austin, I've witnessed the city's efforts to welcome the black community and protect the LGBT community (both of which I am a part of). While the city is still struggling with navigating the black community, I stay because I love and respect the efforts being made by the city. While Austin isn't perfect, I appreciate that we have a community that is always striving toward perfection. This redistricting plan is just one example.

Another reason that I love Austin is its amazing opportunities for an active outdoor life and diverse community. We are nestled in one of the most beautiful and diverse parts of the state. As an account executive for Cingular Wireless (years ago), I was tasked with driving all over Austin to cover retail stores. I worked with retailers all over town. This job let me see both little pockets of Austin and the greater Austin community all at once.

Please provide any other information you wish to be considered during the selection of the most qualified applicants for the Commission.

I would be honored to serve Austin by serving on the commission. I believe that my experience and training would lend itself well to the work being done by the commission. Austin is my home and I believe that the work being done by the commission will be very important to Austin's future success.

Thank you for this opportunity.
